CLARITY AT EVERY STAGE OF THE VENDOR ENGAGEMENT LIFECYCLE, FROM ONBOARDING TO OFFBOARDING

Complexities Arise as Vendor Risk Management Becomes a Board-Level Concern

Increasing reliance on third parties, more data breaches, as well as new standards, frameworks, and regulations make vendor risk management a board-level concern. Still, companies around the world are experiencing similar challenges when identifying and assessing new vendors, suppliers, and third parties. From afar, the assessment process sounds simple: send and receive. Yet, third-party risk teams encounter many complexities along the way, including: scaling and automating workflows; getting vendors to respond to assessments; organizing a vendor inventory; pinpointing risks and associated controls; addressing issues and tracking mitigation; managing contracts; collaborating with stakeholders (procurement, security, privacy, and others); and monitoring vendors as new risks and compliance issues arise.
